10 - Which parts of this course were most valuable to your overall learning experience?

Response Rate	7/17 (41.18%)
• It being a seminar course with built in lab • Jessie provided ample opportunities for extra help • How the content was presented made it easy to follow, and helped me stay on track. The labs and frequent problem sets allowed actual application of the theory we covered in class. In this sense, I really appreciated the in-class group exercises where we discussed a question for around 10 minutes, then the instructor walked us through the question. • I appreciated the feedback given to me on both my exam and on my homework assignments, and how willing both the professor and the teaching assistant were in helping me to understand concepts. • The syllabus was well-structured, and I appreciated the well-organized PowerPoint presentations. The visuals were especially helpful in making the material easier to understand. Additionally, the provided resources were highly beneficial. • The labs and assignments were the most valuable parts of this course for me. They allowed me to not only learn the material but also actively apply what I had learned, reinforcing my understanding and making the concepts more practical. • The problem sets. They are where both the coding and material from class combined and often required either figuring some things out on your own, collaborating to find solutions, or learning how to troubleshoot/look up things for R specifically. This helped me be able to more comfortably approach problems I ran into when trying to use R outside of class or when reading results in quant heavy journal articles.

11 - Which parts of this course would you suggest changing?

Response Rate	7/17 (41.18%)
• n/a • N/A • Since I am aware that grading naturally takes time, it would be helpful if we briefly went over the problem sets at the beginning of the class. • I feel like we got into the advanced R techniques way too soon in the course, and I would have liked to have spent more time in class discussing the basics. As a student who had no coding or mathematics experience whatsoever (something that is admittedly an issue with my undergraduate program), I felt like I was drowning at points in the course, and though the professor and TA were very helpful when asked I sometimes felt like I did not even know what to ask them because I was so far behind my classmates. • wouldn't change anything in the course itself, as I found it well-structured and effective. However, I think it would be helpful if the program included a math camp, like those offered by other programs, to level students up in basic concepts before starting the course. This could provide a stronger foundation and help ensure everyone feels prepared to engage with the material. • I don't know how viable this is, but slightly more time for some of the labs would be nice. The labs I often felt were the most useful were also often cut short due to the lecture running slightly long. But I acknowledge that all that material needed to be covered in the lecture. Office hours were helpful and the encouraged collaboration amongst the class helped patch over any gaps that might have formed from the truncated labs. • I suggest spending more time on labs because they are the most important and helpful when completing assignments.

13 - Please provide any feedback on Michael's lecture below.

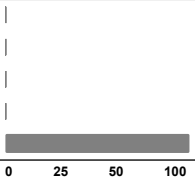

Response Rate 6/17 (35.29%)

- He was great!
- His classroom presence was good, he was a good presenter and he used real-life examples to illustrate his points. He looked like a natural.
- Michael is genuinely an excellent lecturer. No complaints here!
- Michael delivered a very interesting and practical lecture that was easy to understand and highly engaging.
- Michael's lecture was super clear, and he did an excellent job reinforcing the concepts multiple times, which made them easy to understand and process. One suggestion I'd offer is to manage the time a bit more effectively to allow for a short break in the middle of the lecture, as it would help maintain focus and engagement throughout.
- The first attempt to answer a question often was a little too high level for this particular course, although he always followed up with a revised simpler answer right after. This was helpful for me, but some people who may be struggling to keep up might get more confused. Overall, the pace of the lecture was good and I think on par with those that Jessie gave.
