10 - Which parts of this course were most valuable to your overall learning experience?

Response Rate 5/13 (38.46%)

- The lectures and problem sets are definitely the main contributors to my learning in this course. I understand the need for exams however they do not facilitate learning as much as the problem sets do, as far as evaluations assignments go. The lectures are a great introduction to "theme" of each week and doing the labs together with the instructor is very helpful too. I don't think being "hand held" the first time seeing something new is necessarily something negative.
- Interpretation of results
- I appreciated the weekly problem set structure, as well as the inclusion of additional readings and resources if I was interested in the topic. Professor went above and beyond in preparing course materials.
- The problem sets helped me to engage in real life application of R, and interpretations of findings.
- I very much appreciated the fact that the problem sets partially concerned real-life processes, e.g. electoral fraud in Russia. Thanks to that abstract and sometimes counterintuitive formulas turned out to be useful in inferring significant information from the processes around us.

11 - Which parts of this course would you suggest changing?

Response Rate 4/13 (30.77%)

- I don't necessarily feel the need to change anything. I think a valuable addition would be a taking some of the lecture time to review the answer key for the problem set. This would have been helpful to get a sense of what a perfect one looks like. Maybe not necessary every week but specifically when interpretations are on the agenda. I feel that that might spur some conversation or discussion in class.
- The practice we do during our lab sessions should be more similar to our assignments which are kind of harder to solve. Class group collaboration for assignments did not really work out despite efforts to create them at the beginning of the semester so probably groups should be assigned in class to enhance collaboration efforts. Probably the class should be spread for two separate days due to the amount of information on slides because during our break sessions some of my colleagues complain of being weary mentally.
- Maybe reducing the speed at which new R code was introduced, as it was difficult to reinforce the material from previous weeks.
- I am not convinced that a course covering such an extended body of knowledge should have a duration of one semester.
